If bright yellows and oranges swirled in your mind, it wouldn't surprise a group of scientists at the University of California, Berkeley.Their new study found that people associate upbeat, major-key music with lighter, more vibrant yellow-toned colors, while slower music in minor keys actually gives people the blues.These results were the same for participants in both California and Mexico, suggesting humans may have a surprisingly universal emotional color palette. [Eye Tricks: Gallery of Visual Illusions]"The results were remarkably strong and consistent across individuals and cultures and clearly pointed to the powerful role that emotions play in how the human brain maps from hearing music to seeing colors," study researcher Stephen Palmer, a UC Berkeley vision scientist, said in a statement."Surprisingly, we can predict with 95 percent accuracy how happy or sad the colors people pick will be based on how happy or sad the music is that they are listening to," Palmer added.Palmer and his colleagues studied nearly 100 men and women, half in the San Francisco Bay Area and half in Guadalajara, Mexico. The participants listened to 18 varied pieces of classical music by Johann Sebastian Bach, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart and Johannes Brahms. They also were given a 37-color palette and told to choose five colors that best matched each song.Overall, most people chose an array of warm colors to accompany the upbeat songs and darker, grayer, bluer colors to go with the more somber ones.The researchers saw the same pattern when they tweaked the experiment to use facial expressions instead of colors — happy faces were matched with upbeat music in major keys, while sad faces were paired with gloomier tunes. The results suggest emotions are responsible for music-color associations.The scientists hope to expand their research to study other musical norms and cultures. Next, they plan to recruit participants in Turkey, where traditional music often uses scales beyond major and minor keys."We know that in Mexico and the U.S. the responses are very similar," Palmer said. "But we don't yet know about China or Turkey."The study seems consistent with previous research on color associations. One such study published in the journal BMC Medical Research Methodology in 2010 found that people with depression or anxiety were more likely to associate their mood with the color gray, while happier people preferred yellow.The new research was published this week in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences and will be presented at the International Association of Colour conference at the United Kingdom's University of Newcastle in July.Follow us @livescience, Facebook & Google+. She turned around to look at me One more time, as I was walkin' away Sayin' over her shoulder, "Boy, We're bound to meet again someday on the avenue." Tangled up in blue. I remember stayin' in the north woods Living in a vagabond hotel One day there in the pouring rain I could feel how the ax just fell. So I drifted down to New Orleans And I was lucky not to be destroyed I almost died of the bulldog clap Two miles outside of Delacroix. But all the while I was alone The past was close behind, I seen a lot of women But she never escaped my mind, and I just grew Tangled up in blue. She was dancin' in the Flamingo hotel And I was passin' by, so I stopped in for a beer, I just kept starin' at the side of her face In the spotlight so clear. And later on when the crowd thinned out I was just about to do the same. She was standing there right behind my chair Tougling me said: "You know it ain't no accident that you came." I muttered somethin' underneath my breath. She studied the lines on my face. I must admit I felt a little uneasy When she bent down to tie the laces of my shoe. Tangled up in blue. She lit a burner on the stove, wearin' a dress made up of stars and stripes "I thought you'd never say hello," she said "You know you look like you could be the silent type." Then she opened up the Bible And she started quotin' it to me Jeremiah chapter seventeen From verses 21 and 33. And every one of them words rang true And glowed like burnin' coal Pourin' off of every page Like it was written in my soul from me to you. Tangled up in blue. I lived with them on Montague Street In a basement down the stairs. There was music in the cafes at night, There was revolution in the air. Then he started into dealing with slaves And something inside of her froze. She had to sell everything she owned Even her jewellery and her clothes. And when it all came crashing on, I became withdrawn. The only thing I knew how to do Was to keep on keepin' on Like a bird that flew Tangled up in blue. So now I'm goin' back again, I got to get to her and be brave. All the people we used to know, At least the ones that ain't in the grave. Some are bricklayers, some are bankrobbers Some are burglars and some are truck drivers' wives. I don't know how it all got started, I have no idea what they're doin' with their lives. But me, I'm still on the road Headin' for another joint We always did feel the same. We just saw it from a different point of view, Tangled up in blue. *) The actual reference varied from night to night, and none of them stand out as the obviously "right" quote. She was married when they first met, to a man four times her age. He left her penniless, in the state of regret, it was time to bust out of the cage. They drove that car as far as they could, abandoned it out west, splitting up on a dark, sad night, both agreeing that it was best. And she turned around to look at him as he was walking away. She said I wish I could tell you all the things that I never learned how to say. He said thats alright babe I love you too, but we were tangled up in blue. He had a steady job and a pretty face, and everything seemed to fit. One day he could just feel the waste, he put it all down and split. And he headed down to New Orleans, where they treated him like a boy. He nearly went mad in Baton Rouge, he nearly drowned in Delacroix. And all the time he was alone, the past was close behind, he had one too many lovers then, and none of them were too refined, all except for you, but you were tangled up in blue. She was working in the blinding light, and I stopped in for a drink. I just kept looking at her face so white, I didn't know what to think. Later on as the crowd thinned out, I was getting ready to leave. She was standing there, beside my chair, saying "What's that you got up your sleeve?" I said "nothing baby, and thats for sure" She leaned down into my face. I could feel the heat and the pulse of her as she bent down to tie the laces of my shoe. Tangled up in blue. I lived with them on Montague street in a basement down the stairs. There was snow all winter and no heat, revolution was in the air. Then one day all his slaves ran free, and something inside of him died. The only thing I could do was be me, and get on that train and ride. And when it all came crashing down, I was already south. I didn't know whether the world was flat or round, I had the worst taste in my mouth, that I ever knew, Tangled up in blue. Now I'm going back again, maybe tomorrow, maybe next year. I've got to find someone among the women and men whose destiny is unclear. Some are ministers of illusion, some are masters of the trade. All under strong delusion, all of their beds unmade. Me I'm heading toward the sun, trying to stay out of the joints. We always did love the very same one. We just saw her from a different point of view, Tangled up in blue. Current acoustic version (1997-) Since Larry Campbell joined the band in 1997, Tangled has been played as an acoustic song, with Larry playing the intro below. Larry's guitar is played with a capo on the 2nd fret. Bob's guitar is uncapoed. The chords are more or less those of the Blood on the Tracks version above.
